PUBLIC COMMENT

Paul Macknosky of DCED took center stage and shared his platform with those in attendance. Since water is unstoppable, his purpose was to inform us of governmental assessment of and potential responses for residents, homes and property located in areas prone to flooding. He broke it down into two response categories: Emergency and Mitigation. Emergency involves real and immediate threats to loss of life and property and may have a threshold of loss incurred to reach to receive financial aid. Mitigation involves study and analysis which results in planning and preparation for future flooding events. He highly recommended that Ransom Township work with Lackawanna County as they contemplate a countywide assessment, addressing micro issues to form a macro response to the waterways connecting and affecting multiple municipalities. This big picture look would have specific targeted areas. Streams are systems whereby fixing one area can cause problems for someone else. He fielded questions and offered to assist the township going forward.

In other business, Barbara Wetzel asked about the homes around the post office and the surrounding area stating it appears it could be a fire hazard in which someone could be killed. Chairman Bird will let Donny know so he can inspect it. Vito Castelgrande who lives by Lindy Creek on the other side of the mountain also has had issues with excess water seeing the damage that can be incurred from flooding. Donna Urbaniak would like residents to remove litter that may have accumulated along the roadway. She would also like to see if residents are interested in clearing some growth from the Main Street cemetery

Having no further business, Dave motioned to adjourn the meeting and Jerry seconded it. Meeting adjourned at 7:16pm.

Respectfully submitted:
